8 BEHAVIORS OF ABUNDANT LEADERS

CONSIDER YOUR MINDSET AND ACTIONS. DO OTHERS SEE THESE BEHAVIORS IN YOU?

1. GIVE OTHERS CREDIT

Abundant leaders care little about who gets credit. Since they believe that great ideas can come from any source, and that there is no limit on sources or ideas, they aren't compelled to steal someone else's limelight.

2. ASK FOR INPUT

Not seeing themselves as the only source of good ideas or fearing the scrutiny that might come from asking others for help and support, abundant leaders willingly and actively solicit the input of others.

3. EXTEND TRUST

Abundant leaders pour out trust upon others. This doesn't mean that they are gullible or refuse to recognize the risks of failure, it simply means that they know that to achieve the best results today and tomorrow, they must trust others

4. COACH OTHERS

Scarce leaders don't take the time to help others. Heck, they are too focused on their own career path to care about the journey of another. Abundant leaders not only take the time, but they consider coaching both a duty and a privilege.

5. SHARE IDEAS

Since abundant leaders don't care who gets the credit, or feel compelled to be the smartest person in the room, they are willing to put their ideas on the table and allow the team to build on, improve, or toss out as appropriate.

6. CONNECT PEOPLE

When someone is seeking a door to be opened or a problem to be solved, abundant leaders are willing to make connections among members of their network. They have a bias to connect and share.

7. MEET UNSPOKEN NEEDS

Abundant leaders recognize when someone is struggling with a task, an emotion, or any other challenge and reach out to them with a word of encouragement and an offer to help.

8. LISTEN MORE

The truly abundant practice effective listening. They don't just listen to pick up on the key issues as they formulate a response; they listen to understand. They ask clarifying questions.

LEDDINGROUP
CONNECTING PURPOSE TO PERFORMANCE

find more free tools at www.LeddinGroup.com/tools